Griff's Players Downcast at Losing Their High Position.

GRIFMEN DOWNCAST AT SLIP TO SECOND

But They All Agree That Mackmen Will Not Go Home at the Head of Procession.

McBRIDE ORATES A LITTLE

Players Busy Doping Out Possibilities of Defeat and Victory at Fenway Park.

By THOMAS KIRBY.

BOSTON, Mass., May 30.—The Griffmen are slightly downcast at seeing the world's champions once more back in first place today, but they all insist that the Capitalian forces again will lead the procession before they return home.

"We should have won that second game, anyway," says Captain McBride, "and that defeat only serves to make the boys fight the harder. Connie Mack may be leading today, but he won't stay there long."

The players working under Clark Griffith were busy today darning out their standing following possible victories and defeats in the holiday bill with the Red Sox. Bill Carrigan has an earnest band of players here, who believe they have a chance to win the pennant, and not one of the games billed for Fenway Park will be easily won.

Rankin Johnson was beaten by his famous namesake in sitting in the reflected glory of the greatest pitcher that baseball knows, he was indeed fortunate. For four innings the Bostonian knew not what the meaning was of a base hit. In the fifth, Gainer smashed out a single to center, but before he caught his balance he was cut down by a single throw from Williams to McBride.

In the eighth, with one out, Gainer doubled to right, but he never survived to reach third base, because the batter from the bat was taken care of by the pitcher to third base. The second game yesterday was one of the most intensely interesting games that has been staged in Fenway Park. There was every combination of play that could be expected, and the diamond should make a contest on the diamond alluring to the men who consider baseball the greatest magnet of all outdoor sports.

The Washington defense, that has so steadily set back pitchers who thought they had a chance to turn back the Washington offensive movement, crumbled in the first game. It all but missed the point in the second game, in which the Griffmen hung on to the last moment and were robbed of a possible victory. The Griffmen scored in the lowering shadows of the afternoon when the umpire called Lewis to play a play that was not expected, and he was hit by a double to the right fielder. Ordinarily the Washington ball club is willing to endure almost anything that is handed out to it by an umpire, but yesterday the opinion that the umpire had erred in his judgment.

No matter how you may stand, or from what angle you may view the aspirations of this good looking young leader of the Washington baseball team, you have to give it to him for the marvelous and wonderful way in which he has entered into the equation of driving, forcing, and storming the Washington baseball team into the position into which it has now figured.

There is a pretty well authenticated story among the ball players here that individual who had conditioned himself in the near South could figure how he could come back here in shape. But now the Nationals are coming and the Griffmen are going to the uppermost club level where they can command control.

When the schedule of the American League was arranged, it was not thought that the Nationals would be compelled to compete against such opposition as has been offered. Of course, the coming of the Griffmen to Boston was looked upon as one of the biggest events in these parts, and the attraction was shown yesterday by the fact that the two clubs were paid for $372.
